About the Panel Discussion

The African Court on Human and Peoples' Rights (African Human Rights Court) was established in 2006, ten years ago this year. As at the start of 2016, 30 states have accepted the Court's jurisdiction by ratifying the Protocol on the Establishment of the Court. Seven states – including Rwanda – have made declarations under article 34(6) of the Protocol, accepting the right of individual petition directly to the African Human Rights Court.

As at March 2016, six cases have been submitted against Rwanda: Appl.No 003/2014, Ingabire Victoire Umuhoza v Rwanda; Appl.No 003/2013, Rutabingwa Chrysanthe v Rwanda (see also Appl.No 022/2015, Rutabingwa Chrysanthe v Rwanda); Appl.No 002/2014, Faustin Uwintije v Rwanda; Appl.No 016/2015, Kayumba Nyamwassa & others v Republic of Rwanda; Appl.No 017/2015, Kennedy Gihana & others v Rwanda; Appl.No 023/2015, Laurent Munyandilikirwa v Rwanda). The Ingabire Victoire Umuhoza case has been scheduled for hearing at the Court's present session. Rwanda has now apparently withdrawn its declaration under article 34(6).
